

ADMINISTRATIVE

5 May 1978

MEMORANDUM FOR: Director of Central Intelligence
THROUGH : Deputy Director of Central Intelligence, Director, National Foreign Assessment Center
FROM : Acting Coordinator for Academic Relations and External Analytical Support
SUBJECT : Meeting with University Presidents and Academic Dignitaries

STATINTL

1. Action Requested: Signature on the reply to [redacted] letter and the letters to ten academic dignitaries inviting them to the Agency for a day of discussion and briefings sometime in June.

2. Background: The letters to the eight university chief executives and the presidents of the American Council on Education and the Association of American Universities are only marginally different from the ones you sent to eight university presidents inviting them to the first meeting of this kind on March 10.

[redacted] recommended this group, and spoke to them in April in Palo Alto about your desire to improve communications between the academic and intelligence communities. [redacted] writes that they all have a constructive attitude in this regard. He also told me in a recent conversation that he believes they constitute about one quarter of the most prestigious and influential leaders in academia.

STATINTL

3. In addition to [redacted] and the ten men he has recommended, I will also reinvite three presidents who were not able to accept your March 10 invitation but who said they were anxious to accept at another time. They are Robert Sproull, President of the University of Rochester, Norman Hackerman, President of Rice, and Peter Magrath, President of the University of Minnesota. Sproull, incidentally, is one of the men Wes met with in Palo Alto. The reiterations of your invitations to these three gentlemen will be handled informally through this office [redacted] new letters from you do not seem to be necessary.

STATINTL

STATINTL

STAT

STAT

Approved For Release 2003/12/03 : CIA-RDP86B00985R000300160029-2

SUBJECT: Meeting with University Presidents and Academic Dignitaries

4. Although we are inviting fourteen men (bios attached), we can probably expect only about half to be able to accept. University presidents generally work year round (unlike many faculty who are on nine month contracts), but we will have difficulty settling on a date in June that will be convenient for you and them. [redacted] and I agree with [redacted] recommendation (his letter is attached) regarding the scheduling. Several days after your letters are posted, this office will contact the offices of the fourteen invitees and settle on a date in June agreeable to most of them, based in the first instance on your schedule.

STATINTL

5. The schedule and sequence of meetings for the June visit should be substantially the same as the successful meeting of March 10. Once a date is settled on, this office will coordinate the remaining arrangements. I have discussed all of this with [redacted] who as you know, is to undergo surgery.

6. Actions Recommended:

STATINTL

a. That you sign the letter to [redacted]

b. That you sign the letters to the ten distinguished academics.

c. That you indicate your concurrence to the proposals above for handling the second university presidents visit.

STATINTL

Attachments

STAT

Approved For Release 2003/12/03 : CIA-RDP86B00985R000300160029-2

SUBJECT: Meeting with University Presidents and Academic Dignitaries

APPROVED:

/S/
Director of Central Intelligence

DISAPPROVED:

Director of Central Intelligence

DATE: 11 May 78

STAT

Approved for release 2003/12/03 : CIA-RDP86B00985R000300160029-2
ADMINISTRATIVE

SUBJECT: Meeting with University Presidents and Academic Dignitaries

Distribution:

Orig - DCI
1 - DDCI
1 - ER
1 - D/NFAC
1 - NFAC Registry
1 - A/DCI/PA
3 - NFAC/CAR

STATINTL NFAC/ACAR [ ] /js (5 May 1978)

STAT

Approved for release 2003/12/03 : CIA-RDP86B00985R000300160029-2
ADMINISTRATIVE

The Director

Central Intelligence Agency

ER 78-4340/21A

Washington, D.C. 20505

11 May 78

STATINTL

Dear [redacted]

I am delighted that you were so successful in [redacted] in your discussions about relations between the intelligence and academic communities. Very shortly I will be contacting the eleven gentlemen you met with to invite them to visit CIA for a day of substantive discussions and briefings. As you know, the first meeting of this kind was held on March 10 and was quite rewarding for all concerned.

I have decided to try to arrange the next meeting for sometime during the month of June. [redacted] and STATINTL

STATINTL [redacted] of my Academic Relations Staff will STATINTL settle on a date that is agreeable to you and [redacted] as many of the men you spoke with as possible. [redacted] and STATINTL [redacted] also will coordinate arrangements.

I do look forward to seeing you again at that time, and hope that we can arrange to have some time together privately and informally. Once we have settled on a date, we can make additional plans.

Yours,

/S/

STANSFIELD TURNER

Dr. Wesley W. Posvar
Chancellor of the University
University of Pittsburgh
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania 15260

11 May 78

Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear President Sanford:

Since its inception, the Central Intelligence Agency has sought to maintain effective relationships with scholars and academic institutions throughout the United States. These relationships have been of inestimable value to the intelligence community and ultimately, to the foreign policymakers it serves.

In the wake of considerable public criticism over the last several years, however, the Agency has had difficulty in maintaining these open and mutually beneficial relationships. I would like to ask your help and advice in determining how best to restore a useful but proper connection between academia and the world of intelligence.

Clearly there are limits beyond which we in the intelligence profession should not go in dealing with members of the academic community. I do have very express rules with respect to that today, but how we are operating within these rules is not always clear to others. Today there are also many new opportunities to use unclassified information derived through the collection of intelligence for the benefit of academic research. I do not believe that we have the proper mechanism today to ensure the adequate provision of such information to academic institutions.

Accordingly, I would like to ask you to join with me and several other university presidents and leaders of the American academic community for a day here at the Central Intelligence Agency. The objective would be to have a free-flowing exchange of ideas on how to reestablish the academic-intelligence relationship on a sound and proper basis for mutual advantage. This will be a quiet, private meeting of perhaps twelve of us, during which we will take the opportunity of asking you to visit our CIA facilities and to meet with a variety of Agency officers representing diverse interests and disciplines. My hope would be that in your spending a day with us, our relationship might improve to our mutual benefit, taking into full account the problems of the past and the attitudes of the present.

STATINTL

I have asked [redacted] of my Academic Relations staff to be in touch with you directly to arrange a date in June that will be convenient. They will be available to discuss my invitation further with you, and to make arrangements, if as I hope, you will be able to accept.

Yours sincerely,

STANSFIELD TURNER

President Terry Sanford
Duke University
Durham, North Carolina 27706

The Director

Central Intelligence Agency

Approved For Release 2003/12/03 : CIA-RDP86B00985R000300160029-2

11 May 78

Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear President Sawhill:

Since its inception, the Central Intelligence Agency has sought to maintain effective relationships with scholars and academic institutions throughout the United States. These relationships have been of inestimable value to the intelligence community and ultimately, to the foreign policymakers it serves.

In the wake of considerable public criticism over the last several years, however, the Agency has had difficulty in maintaining these open and mutually beneficial relationships. I would like to ask your help and advice in determining how best to restore a useful but proper connection between academia and the world of intelligence.

Clearly there are limits beyond which we in the intelligence profession should not go in dealing with members of the academic community. I do have very express rules with respect to that today, but how we are operating within these rules is not always clear to others. Today there are also many new opportunities to use unclassified information derived through the collection of intelligence for the benefit of academic research. I do not believe that we have the proper mechanism today to ensure the adequate provision of such information to academic institutions.

Accordingly, I would like to ask you to join with me and several other university presidents and leaders of the American academic community for a day here at the Central Intelligence Agency. The objective would be to have a free-flowing exchange of ideas on how to reestablish the academic-intelligence relationship on a sound and proper basis for mutual advantage. This will be a quiet, private meeting of perhaps twelve of us, during which we will take the opportunity of asking you to visit our CIA facilities and to meet with a variety of Agency officers representing diverse interests and disciplines. My hope would be that in your spending a day with us, our relationship might improve to our mutual benefit, taking into full account the problems of the past and the attitudes of the present.

Approved For Release 2003/12/03 : CIA-RDP86B00985R000300160029-2

STATINTL

I have asked [redacted] of my Academic Relations staff to be in touch with you directly to arrange a date in June that will be convenient. They will be available to discuss my invitation further with you, and to make arrangements, if as I hope, you will be able to accept.

Yours sincerely,

STANSFIELD TURNER

Dr. John Sawhill, President
New York University
Washington Square
New York, New York 10003

11 May 78

Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear President Saxon:

Since its inception, the Central Intelligence Agency has sought to maintain effective relationships with scholars and academic institutions throughout the United States. These relationships have been of inestimable value to the intelligence community and ultimately, to the foreign policymakers it serves.

In the wake of considerable public criticism over the last several years, however, the Agency has had difficulty in maintaining these open and mutually beneficial relationships. I would like to ask your help and advice in determining how best to restore a useful but proper connection between academia and the world of intelligence.

Clearly there are limits beyond which we in the intelligence profession should not go in dealing with members of the academic community. I do have very express rules with respect to that today, but how we are operating within these rules is not always clear to others. Today there are also many new opportunities to use unclassified information derived through the collection of intelligence for the benefit of academic research. I do not believe that we have the proper mechanism today to ensure the adequate provision of such information to academic institutions.

Accordingly, I would like to ask you to join with me and several other university presidents and leaders of the American academic community for a day here at the Central Intelligence Agency. The objective would be to have a free-flowing exchange of ideas on how to reestablish the academic-intelligence relationship on a sound and proper basis for mutual advantage. This will be a quiet, private meeting of perhaps twelve of us, during which we will take the opportunity of asking you to visit our CIA facilities and to meet with a variety of Agency officers representing diverse interests and disciplines. My hope would be that in your spending a day with us, our relationship might improve to our mutual benefit, taking into full account the problems of the past and the attitudes of the present.

STATINTL

I have asked [redacted] Latell of my Academic Relations staff to be in touch with you directly to arrange a date in June that will be convenient. They will be available to discuss my invitation further with you, and to make arrangements, if as I hope, you will be able to accept.

Yours sincerely,

STANSFIELD TURNER

Dr. David S. Saxon, President
University of California
Berkeley, California 94720

Washington, D.C. 20505

11 May 78

Dear Dr. Peltason:

Since its inception, the Central Intelligence Agency has sought to maintain effective relationships with scholars and academic institutions throughout the United States. These relationships have been of inestimable value to the intelligence community and ultimately, to the foreign policymakers it serves.

In the wake of considerable public criticism over the last several years, however, the Agency has had difficulty in maintaining these open and mutually beneficial relationships. I would like to ask your help and advice in determining how best to restore a useful but proper connection between academia and the world of intelligence.

Clearly there are limits beyond which we in the intelligence profession should not go in dealing with members of the academic community. I do have very express rules with respect to that today, but how we are operating within these rules is not always clear to others. Today there are also many new opportunities to use unclassified information derived through the collection of intelligence for the benefit of academic research. I do not believe that we have the proper mechanism today to ensure the adequate provision of such information to academic institutions.

Accordingly, I would like to ask you to join with me and several university presidents and leaders of the American academic community for a day here at the Central Intelligence Agency. The objective would be to have a free-flowing exchange of ideas on how to reestablish the academic-intelligence relationship on a sound and proper basis for mutual advantage. This will be quiet, private meeting of perhaps twelve of us, during which we will take the opportunity of asking you to visit our CIA facilities and to meet with a variety of Agency officers representing diverse interests and disciplines. My hope would be that in your spending a day with us, our relationship might improve to our mutual benefit, taking into full account the problems of the past and the attitudes of the present.

STATINTL

I have asked [redacted] of my Academic Relations staff to be in touch with you directly to arrange a date in June that will be convenient. They will be available to discuss my invitation further with you, and to make arrangements, if as I hope, you will be able to accept.

Yours sincerely,

STANSFIELD TURNER

Dr. Jack W. Peltason, President
American Council on Education
One Dupont Circle
Washington, D.C. 20036

Washington, D C 20505

11 May 78

Dear President Parks:

Since its inception, the Central Intelligence Agency has sought to maintain effective relationships with scholars and academic institutions throughout the United States. These relationships have been of inestimable value to the intelligence community and ultimately, to the foreign policymakers it serves.

In the wake of considerable public criticism over the last several years, however, the Agency has had difficulty in maintaining these open and mutually beneficial relationships. I would like to ask your help and advice in determining how best to restore a useful but proper connection between academia and the world of intelligence.

Clearly there are limits beyond which we in the intelligence profession should not go in dealing with members of the academic community. I do have very express rules with respect to that today, but how we are operating within these rules is not always clear to others. Today there are also many new opportunities to use unclassified information derived through the collection of intelligence for the benefit of academic research. I do not believe that we have the proper mechanism today to ensure the adequate provision of such information to academic institutions.

Accordingly, I would like to ask you to join with me and several other university presidents and leaders of the American academic community for a day here at the Central Intelligence Agency. The objective would be to have a free-flowing exchange of ideas on how to reestablish the academic-intelligence relationship on a sound and proper basis for mutual advantage. This will be a quiet, private meeting of perhaps twelve of us, during which we will take the opportunity of asking you to visit our CIA facilities and to meet with a variety of Agency officers representing diverse interests and disciplines. My hope would be that in your spending a day with us, our relationship might improve to our mutual benefit, taking into full account the problems of the past and the attitudes of the present.

STATINTL

I have asked [redacted] of my Academic Relations staff to be in touch with you directly to arrange a date in June that will be convenient. They will be available to discuss my invitation further with you, and to make arrangements, if as I hope, you will be able to accept.

Yours sincerely,

STANSFIELD TURNER

Dr. William R. Parks, President
Iowa State University
Ames, Iowa 50010

Washington, D.C. 20505

11 May 78

Dear President Muller:

Since its inception, the Central Intelligence Agency has sought to maintain effective relationships with scholars and academic institutions throughout the United States. These relationships have been of inestimable value to the intelligence community and ultimately, to the foreign policymakers it serves.

In the wake of considerable public criticism over the last several years, however, the Agency has had difficulty in maintaining these open and mutually beneficial relationships. I would like to ask your help and advice in determining how best to restore a useful but proper connection between academia and the world of intelligence.

Clearly there are limits beyond which we in the intelligence profession should not go in dealing with members of the academic community. I do have very express rules with respect to that today, but how we are operating within these rules is not always clear to others. Today there are also many new opportunities to use unclassified information derived through the collection of intelligence for the benefit of academic research. I do not believe that we have the proper mechanism today to ensure the adequate provision of such information to academic institutions.

Accordingly, I would like to ask you to join with me and several other university presidents and leaders of the American academic community for a day here at the Central Intelligence Agency. The objective would be to have a free-flowing exchange of ideas on how to reestablish the academic-intelligence relationship on a sound and proper basis for mutual advantage. This will be a quiet, private meeting of perhaps twelve of us, during which we will take the opportunity of asking you to visit our CIA facilities and to meet with a variety of Agency officers representing diverse interests and disciplines. My hope would be that in your spending a day with us, our relationship might improve to our mutual benefit, taking into full account the problems of the past and the attitudes of the present.

STATINTL

I have asked [redacted] of my Academic Relations staff to be in touch with you directly to arrange a date in June that will be convenient. They will be available to discuss my invitation further with you, and to make arrangements, if as I hope, you will be able to accept.

Yours sincerely,

STANSFIELD TURNER

Dr. Steven Muller, President
Johns Hopkins University
34th and Charles Streets
Baltimore, Maryland 21218

11 May 78

Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear Chancellor LeMaistre:

Since its inception, the Central Intelligence Agency has sought to maintain effective relationships with scholars and academic institutions throughout the United States. These relationships have been of inestimable value to the intelligence community and ultimately, to the foreign policymakers it serves.

In the wake of considerable public criticism over the last several years, however, the Agency has had difficulty in maintaining these open and mutually beneficial relationships. I would like to ask your help and advice in determining how best to restore a useful but proper connection between academia and the world of intelligence.

Clearly there are limits beyond which we in the intelligence profession should not go in dealing with members of the academic community. I do have very express rules with respect to that today, but how we are operating within these rules is not always clear to others. Today there are also many new opportunities to use unclassified information derived through the collection of intelligence for the benefit of academic research. I do not believe that we have the proper mechanism today to ensure the adequate provision of such information to academic institutions.

Accordingly, I would like to ask you to join with me and several university presidents and leaders of the American academic community for a day here at the Central Intelligence Agency. The objective would be to have a free-flowing exchange of ideas on how to reestablish the academic-intelligence relationship on a sound and proper basis for mutual advantage. This will be a quiet, private meeting of perhaps twelve of us, during which we will take the opportunity of asking you to visit our CIA facilities and to meet with a variety of Agency officers representing diverse interests and disciplines. My hope would be that in your spending a day with us, our relationship might improve to our mutual benefit, taking into full account the problems of the past and the attitudes of the present.

STATINTL

I have asked [redacted] of my Academic Relations staff to be in touch with you directly to arrange a date in June that will be convenient. They will be available to discuss my invitation further with you, and to make arrangements, if as I hope, you will be able to accept.

Yours sincerely,

STANSFIELD TURNER

Dr. Charles A. LeMaistre, Chancellor
University of Texas
Austin, Texas 78701

Washington, D.C. 20505

11 May 78

Dear President Fleming:

Since its inception, the Central Intelligence Agency has sought to maintain effective relationships with scholars and academic institutions throughout the United States. These relationships have been of inestimable value to the intelligence community and ultimately, to the foreign policymakers it serves.

In the wake of considerable public criticism over the last several years, however, the Agency has had difficulty in maintaining these open and mutually beneficial relationships. I would like to ask your help and advice in determining how best to restore a useful but proper connection between academia and the world of intelligence.

Clearly there are limits beyond which we in the intelligence profession should not go in dealing with members of the academic community. I do have very express rules with respect to that today, but how we are operating within these rules is not always clear to others. Today there are also many new opportunities to use unclassified information derived through the collection of intelligence for the benefit of academic research. I do not believe that we have the proper mechanism today to ensure the adequate provision of such information to academic institutions.

Accordingly, I would like to ask you to join with me and several other university presidents and leaders of the American academic community for a day here at the Central Intelligence Agency. The objective would be to have a free-flowing exchange of ideas on how to reestablish the academic-intelligence relationship on a sound and proper basis for mutual advantage. This will be a quiet, private meeting of perhaps twelve of us, during which we will take the opportunity of asking you to visit our CIA facilities and to meet with a variety of Agency officers representing diverse interests and disciplines. My hope would be that in your spending a day with us, our relationship might improve to our mutual benefit, taking into full account the problems of the past and the attitudes of the present.

STATINTL

I have asked [redacted] of my Academic Relations staff to be in touch with you directly to arrange a date in June that will be convenient. They will be available to discuss my invitation further with you, and to make arrangements, if as I hope, you will be able to accept.

Yours sincerely,

STANSFIELD TURNER

Dr. Robben W. Fleming, President
University of Michigan
Ann Arbor, Michigan 48109

11 May 78

Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear Dr. Bartlett:

Since its inception, the Central Intelligence Agency has sought to maintain effective relationships with scholars and academic institutions throughout the United States. These relationships have been of inestimable value to the intelligence community and ultimately, to the foreign policymakers it serves.

In the wake of considerable public criticism over the last several years, however, the Agency has had difficulty in maintaining these open and mutually beneficial relationships. I would like to ask your help and advice in determining how best to restore a useful but proper connection between academia and the world of intelligence.

Clearly there are limits beyond which we in the intelligence profession should not go in dealing with members of the academic community. I do have very express rules with respect to that today, but how we are operating within these rules is not always clear to others. Today there are also many new opportunities to use unclassified information derived through the collection of intelligence for the benefit of academic research. I do not believe that we have the proper mechanism today to ensure the adequate provision of such information to academic institutions.

Accordingly, I would like to ask you to join with me and several university presidents and leaders of the American academic community for a day here at the Central Intelligence Agency. The objective would be to have a free-flowing exchange of ideas on how to reestablish the academic-intelligence relationship on a sound and proper basis for mutual advantage. This will be a quiet, private meeting of perhaps twelve of us, during which we will take the opportunity of asking you to visit our CIA facilities and to meet with a variety of Agency officers representing diverse interests and disciplines. My hope would be that in your spending a day with us, our relationship might improve to our mutual benefit, taking into full account the problems of the past and the attitudes of the present.

STATINTL

I have asked [redacted] of my Academic Relations staff to be in touch with you directly to arrange a date in June that will be convenient. They will be available to discuss my invitation further with you, and to make arrangements, if as I hope, you will be able to accept.

Yours sincerely,

STANSFIELD TURNER

Dr. Thomas A. Bartlett, President
Association of American Universities
One Dupont Circle, Suite 730
Washington, D.C. 20036

11 May 78

Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear President Hackney:

Since its inception, the Central Intelligence Agency has sought to maintain effective relationships with scholars and academic institutions throughout the United States. These relationships have been of inestimable value to the intelligence community and ultimately, to the foreign policymakers it serves.

In the wake of considerable public criticism over the last several years, however, the Agency has had difficulty in maintaining these open and mutually beneficial relationships. I would like to ask your help and advice in determining how best to restore a useful but proper connection between academia and the world of intelligence.

Clearly there are limits beyond which we in the intelligence profession should not go in dealing with members of the academic community. I do have very express rules with respect to that today, but how we are operating within these rules is not always clear to others. Today there are also many new opportunities to use unclassified information derived through the collection of intelligence for the benefit of academic research. I do not believe that we have the proper mechanism today to ensure the adequate provision of such information to academic institutions.

Accordingly, I would like to ask you to join with me and several other university presidents and leaders of the American academic community for a day here at the Central Intelligence Agency. The objective would be to have a free-flowing exchange of ideas on how to reestablish the academic-intelligence relationship on a sound and proper basis for mutual advantage. This will be a quiet, private meeting of perhaps twelve of us, during which we will take the opportunity of asking you to visit our CIA facilities and to meet with a variety of Agency officers representing diverse interests and disciplines. My hope would be that in your spending a day with us, our relationship might improve to our mutual benefit, taking into full account the problems of the past and the attitudes of the present.

STATINTL

I have asked [redacted] of my Academic Relations staff to be in touch with you directly to arrange a date in June that will be convenient. They will be available to discuss my invitation further with you, and to make arrangements, if as I hope, you will be able to accept.

Yours sincerely,

STANSFIELD TURNER

Dr. Francis S. Hackney, President
Tulane University
6823 St. Charles Avenue
New Orleans, Louisiana 70118

Approved For Release 2003/12/03 : CIA-RDP86B00985R000300160029-2
TRANSMITTAL SLIP

TO:

NFAC/CAR

ROOM NO.	BUILDING
3E49	Hqs

REMARKS:

FROM:

ROOM NO.

BUILDING

EXTENSION

Approved For Release 2003/12/03 : CIA-RDP86B00985R000300160029-2